Historic Town, Modern Home

Choose the right home for your lifestyle from a variety of layouts and exterior aesthetics. Get the most out of your new home with our popular design features that now come standard, including hardwood flooring, 9’ ceilings and oak staircases.
Disheartened by price surges, bidding wars, lines and overcrowding, an entire crop of Torontonians and GTAers are chasing a slower-paced lifestyle and affordable living options.

It’s a reality most GTA dwellers can relate to. A bright-eyed youngster sets out for the big city, maybe for school or their first job, or just after a little independence. Taking advantage of every party, networking event and restaurant opening in town, the GTA offers an endless array of opportunities just waiting to be explored. And with their two roommates and maybe a little help from mom and dad, they got this.

Fast forward ten years later, and life has gotten real. Lingering student debt persists, marriage and kids come into play and the realities of the 50-hour work week have them living for the weekend, yet struggling to be able to afford anything. They’re trying to save to buy a house for their growing lives.

There has to be an easier way. After all, it seems ridiculous that a dual income household with steady salaries should have to worry about how to pay rent and bills, and maybe go out to dinner here and there. This isn’t what they had in mind back when they assumed the suburban life their parents had would never be for them.

Suddenly, even the die hard urbanites are understanding the appeal of moving out of the GTA to a place where the problems of the city won’t follow. The small town revival is real, and it is their key to true independence, the type they found in the city ten years ago and which they can barely remember now. A chance for them to step surviving and start thriving. With the average home price a cool $100k+ less, these small, under-populated towns give families a chance to invest, to travel, to try new things and most importantly to get out and live, with about half the financial stresses of their big city cohorts.

And it’s not quite the death to their social life one might expect either. Cities like Hamilton and regions like Niagara are more populated than ever with young GTA transplants breathing new life into the once sleepy communities, and giving rise to trendy restaurants, artisan coffee shops, recreational opportunities and nightlife. The best part is, these places don’t come with a line-up, a cover, or a crowd.

Now, this might be a stark contrast from what the experts tell us – the horde of magazines, news stories and sound bites we hear proclaiming that millennials are rejecting their parent’s lives. They say they hate the suburbs and want walkable, urban environments, we can’t help but wonder if this is the freedom millennials were really after, or if the neighbourhood they were looking for walkable, urban environments, we can’t help but wonder if this is the freedom they’ve been after, for about half the price and half the hassle. A distilled version; leaving only the stuff they love, like authentic interactions and more face time, a space and a medical office. Isn’t this the true representation of the growing minimal movement that’s starting to take hold? Where neighbours are there for each other, not battling over parking spaces. Where you can still find that artisan cup of coffee or craft beer, and know the person pouring it for you, or believe it or not, the farmer who grew the raw ingredients.

Small towns seem to be the only place left where GTAers stand a chance at starting something that’s all their own, maybe even with a little extra money to invest, explore and live a full life.

And while these small town transplants may think they’ll be shunned by the locals, just one more hipster driving up the demand for new housing and overpriced coffee, Canadian hospitality and grace reign true in these towns in a way that we’re seldom accustomed to in Toronto. Sure, you may hear the occasional grumble, but it’ll pale in comparison to those you heard all day, every day on subway platforms and in traffic jams. Especially when you start to realize the ones grumbling are becoming familiar faces at your local pub and you can now greet them by name.

It’s not just families seeing the appeal either. Businesses, both startups and large organizations, are making the move for the same reason the average Joe is. Lower cost of operation, more room to grow.

When we think back to what experts say about millennials looking for walkable, urban environments, we can’t help thinking how that model has proven unsustainable time and time again, in some of the most popular metropolises in the world. As we crawl across the inner city highways, we’re seeing communities so dense that neighbours could high five from their balconies (although they mostly just ignore each other) and we can’t help but wonder if this is the freedom millennials were really after, or if the neighbourhood they imagined actually looks very different.

Perhaps a place where they can recreate the very best parts of what they’ve been after, for about half the price and half the hassle. A distilled version; leaving only the stuff they love, like authentic interactions and more face time, a space of their very own and a chance to build something real and lasting. Maybe the small towns of Southwestern Ontario are the place they were really looking for.

“Canadian Hospitality and Grace Reign True in These Towns in a Way That We’re Seldom Accustomed To in Toronto”
In the heart of the Niagara region is the charming city of Thorold — a community rich in history and brimming with culture and activity with easy access to the Greater Golden Horseshoe. Thorold has something for everyone and is quickly becoming an ideal location for growing families and those looking to experience life with a little more ease.

The quiet streets and undisturbed green pastures of this peaceful town. Close proximity to the U.S. border, major highways, waterways and regional destinations such as Niagara Falls and wine country aren’t bad either.

Lack of residential growth in the last ten years has left Thorold with housing that doesn’t fit the lifestyle of the next generation of Thorolders looking to start their families in modern digs.

Living in the Niagara region comes with many great benefits, including extraordinary theatres, a world-class casino, festivals, culture and more. The region attracts more than 14 million visitors annually; Thorold offers close proximity to all of Niagara’s famous attractions while being nestled in a peaceful environment that’s all its own.

Unwind in an intimate community surrounded by lush woods and green fields. Enjoy the walking and hiking trails surrounding your home and become fully immersed in the exquisiteness of the Welland Canal, right in Thorold’s backyard.

An influx of new families in Thorold has helped revitalize the city centre. Downtown Thorold offers an array of boutiques, shops and services that have breathed new life into the community without compromising its old-world charm.

Many know Ontario’s Niagara region for its world-famous natural wonders, and as the GTA housing shortage continues, many more have come to know the area as a great place to call home.

At Empire, we’ve been familiar with the Niagara region for a number of years, selling close to 1,600 homes to date at our Imagine community in Niagara Falls and Legacy community in Thorold. Since we began building in the area in 2014, we’ve seen its rapid growth and development firsthand as many new residents have come to the region to raise their families, launch their businesses and pursue higher education.

“Prior to 2015, most of the homebuyers in our Southwestern Ontario communities were either locals or from west GTA, mainly from Mississauga and Brampton,” says Gary Mcilravey, Manager, Market Research at Empire. “This has changed as housing prices in the GTA have increased. Mississauga and Brampton buyers have intensified, and buyers from Toronto and east GTA areas have increased the most.” As communities like Niagara Falls and St. Catharines continue to feel the spillover effects from GTAers dreaming of calling the Niagara Region home, homebuilders are tapping into other nearby cities where there is still land supply to build.

One of these cities is Thorold. Tucked just below the south edge of St. Catharines off Highway 406, about an hour’s drive from Mississauga via the QEW, Thorold for many years was off the beaten path as most people moved to St. Catharines or Niagara Falls. According to regional population growth projections, Thorold is expected to reach about 30,000 people by 2041, from its current population of 18,800. In an interview with The Niagara Falls Review, former Thorold Mayor of eight years, Ted Luciani, said the city’s growth stems largely in part from the mass GTA exodus happening in the region. “First of all, you have people cashing in their $1.5-million home and coming down here where they can get a brand-new home for $500,000,” he said. “We can keep our well-paying jobs in the GTA and we can afford a house in Niagara. That’s the demographic that’s coming down here.”

Thorold is so close to St. Catharines that Brock University is almost directly across the road from Thorold City Hall. Coupled with real estate prices, the city’s unique charm and small-town character have made an impact on homebuyers looking for a change of pace and a connection to nature.

As available low-rise land supply in many towns and cities has been consumed by strong housing demand, opportunities for builders to create low-rise housing communities have eroded drastically since 2015. In comparison, the City of Thorold approved the Port Robinson West Secondary Plan area in 2015, located to the west and east of the newly created Merritt Road exit from Highway 406. This Secondary Plan area is one of the few relatively large areas of low-rise residential lands remaining to be built in the Niagara Region, located right at the interchange to a major highway.

Calderwood residents will be leading the way in creating a vibrant new community of young families, move-uppers and downsizers looking to capitalize on the few opportunities left to own an affordable home in the Niagara region.

In a market with a wide shortage of new and affordable low-rise housing, and new sites selling out virtually overnight, Calderwood offers a rare opportunity for growing families to call Thorold home.
adventure awaits
ON THE GO

Pack the car, grab the kids and go. Take advantage of local convenience and explore all the region has to offer.
TWO WHEELS ARE BETTER THAN FOUR

Thorold is a cyclist-friendly community with bike trails that run across tree-lined streets and off-road paths alike. The city’s historic downtown is accommodating to this favourite local mode of transportation, with plenty of bicyclist infrastructure and parking.

Cycle, paddle and hike through kilometres of country roads, beautiful vineyards, trails and canals that boast some of the region’s most picturesque views.

OUT ON THE WATER

The Welland Canal, just a few minutes west of Calderwood, offers a chance to connect with nature in whatever way inspires you. Run, bike, paddle, walk or fish along this famous river, which winds its way throughout Southwestern Ontario and connects some of the province’s most breathtaking features.

Experience life with a little more ease. Less congestion, more open space, fewer line ups, more exploring and always plenty of clean, fresh air.

CONNECT WITH NATURE

The Greater Niagara Circle Route is a 140 kilometre system of paved and off-road trails that connect the Waterfront, Niagara River and the Welland Canal. Whether cycling, rollerblading or exploring on foot, the trails offer breathtaking views of the Niagara Escarpment and pass through urban centres and downtowns.
