

Danielle Hill
COO

Danielle Hill is the Chief Operating Officer of The Riveter, a network of coworking and community spaces built by women, for everyone. For more than 15 years, Danielle's approachable, results-driven leadership has yielded significant results with high-growth startups like Remitly and Amazon, as well as established companies such as Progressive and Farmers Insurance. She has scaled teams from as small as 10 to as large as 550 people, all while focusing on corporate culture and a collaborative work environment as a top priority. Danielle has developed voice of the customer programs to inform technology teams and enhance product offerings, and managed multi-million dollar budgets to efficiently forecast growth. As a human capital specialist, Danielle is passionate about helping The Riveter to redefine the future of work by including women in the vision.
