

2020 ANNUAL SCIENTIFIC MEETING BY ZOOM

Through the child analytic lens:
Applications of attachment theory to psychoanalytic practice

PRESENTED BY

Norka Malberg, Psy.D.
Discussant: Mark Dangerfield, Ph.D.

Saturday, November 7, 2020, 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m

We are delighted to welcome child and adult psychoanalyst Dr. Norka Malberg as our speaker for our 2020 Annual Scientific Meeting by Zoom. In her morning paper, Dr. Malberg will focus on attachment and sexuality as they manifest in children's play, and in the developing person over time. In the afternoon she will explore the therapeutic challenges that we confront in psychoanalytic practice when working with children, adolescents, and adults online, especially modifications needed to maintain the frame and the focus on attachment, relationship dynamics, and development of mentalization capacities. Dr. Dangerfield will serve as discussant throughout the day.

* Go to www.vapsvt.org to register and read instructions below ****

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

1. To understand the role of playfulness in the context of attachment and sexuality in both child and adult clinical material.
2. To distinguish the differences between a more classical ego psychology treatment focus and a mentalization influenced approach.
3. To understand the characteristics of a developmental psychoanalytic perspective and how they benefit a flexible therapeutic stance while maintaining the therapeutic frame.
4. To identify how the mentalization based treatment model can help to inform the necessary modifications in technique inherent in our work online with children.
5. To distinguish technical modifications influenced by mentalization based theory in the context of psychodynamic psychotherapy.
