

General questions

1. What problems can you identify in this story? Are solutions presented?
2. In what way might this story be relevant in your community?

Further exploration

1. How does the threat to the world's coffee supply make climate change more tangible for consumers? Might that bode well for a push for action to tackle the causes of climate change?
2. Climate change could raise the price of coffee on shelves, but it could also wipe out millions of badly needed jobs in Central America and elsewhere. How should the global response take this into account?
3. Many smaller farmers won't be able to afford the hybrid plants. What can be done to ensure equity in climate change survival?