

General questions

1. What problems can you identify in this story? Are solutions presented?
2. In what way might this story be relevant in your community?

Further exploration

1. Do the companies selling such high sugar products, like Coca Cola, have any responsibility for the public health crisis?
2. Mexico's obesity rate in 2018 was 32.4 percent and many of those also suffer from diabetes, though half of those affected aren't even aware they have the disease. What impact can this have on Mexican society beyond public health?
3. Experts say a culture shift toward healthier diets is needed to halt this public health crisis, but a healthy diet is also a more expensive diet. What can be done to make this culture shift possible, especially for those who can't afford healthier food?