

How to teach with Under-Told Stories

The short answer is in any way you see fit! Here are a couple suggestions.

- Pick a report or topic, watch the video in class or assign it to your students. Then follow the discussion questions or write your own.
- Encourage your students to research beyond the piece.
- Find other examples of the issues reported on
- Analyze the characters that bring the story to life
- Follow up on new developments since the story aired.
- Have students write their own reflections on the report or analyze one of the many angles included in the story.
- Explore the story deeper with any associated podcasts or immersive 360 video on the story page.
