

General questions

1. What problems can you identify in this story? Are solutions presented?
2. In what way might this story be relevant in your community?

Further exploration

1. Do you think construction of the land bridge will bring justice in a meaningful way for the Rondo neighborhood? Why or why not?
2. Could projects like Reconnect Rondo be an option for paying reparations to the descendants of enslaved Americans? In what ways do you think they would be adequate and in what ways do they fall short?
3. Should justice and equity issues weigh into engineering projects? How so?
4. Tyner talks about the loss of intergenerational wealth that occurred when the interstate was built and how that impacts the state's Black community today. How do you think the creation of the land bridge could create economic opportunity? Is it possible to bring back what was lost?