

Suggested writing prompt (250 words)

One question raised in this story concerns the ethics of rich countries luring away the best talents of poorer ones, whether the Philippines or India, and especially countries in sub-Saharan Africa and the Caribbean, which don't graduate a lot of nurses and desperately need their services. But the nurses in this story also say they deserve a chance to seek their highest potential. Do you think it is wrong to recruit from countries with weak medical infrastructure? Why or why not?